

Class #1 Summary

Since this was an introduction class we did many introduction tasks using poll.guru as well as taking time to find what kind of learner we are. With some past experience, finding out how we learn was really nice as that may help us to learn how we grade and how we might be biased against other learning/grading styles. This may help us to remember that as we get into assessment styles that there are many kinds and that there really isn't a one-off box it has to fit into. We also explored how assessments affected us in good/bad ways.

I chose this as it really ties into assessment/evaluation as well as how we grow as teachers, and that we grow with our students
